

The Jesuit Post: Curriculum Guide

What is The Jesuit Post?

The Jesuit Post (TJP) offers a Jesuit, Catholic perspective on the contemporary world. We aim to show that faith is relevant to today's culture and that God is already at work in it. Our work focuses on both sacred and secular issues because we are convinced that God's does too.

Our guiding principle springs from the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius of Loyola: write "as one friend speaks to another." We write as we would speak to others in Jesuit community: funny while still serious, deeply profound and yet light and accessible.

TJP is a project of Jesuits in formation. Nearly all of the contributors are not-yet-ordained Jesuits or Jesuit brothers studying theology or philosophy, or working in our Jesuit ministries. Several recently ordained Jesuits also contribute to our work. On the whole, about 40 Jesuits are currently involved in the project.

In addition to the website, TJP maintains a very active social media presence. We try to contribute to the web's best conversations about faith and culture — whether it touches on politics, theology, Church news, debates about belief and secularity, or really anything else.

We are published by America Media, the home of America Magazine. Please feel free to contact us at editors@thejesuitpost.org.

How to use this Curriculum Guide

This curriculum guide includes articles and videos published by TJP and organized by theme. We hope you find this content helpful in classrooms, for retreats, for faculty formation, or however else you might use it.

The themes are organized in alphabetical order with articles listed according to the date published with the most recently published at the top (except for series listed in order).
